How Does the Service Work?

Residents or owners mail their payments with a machine-readable coupon to a Fiserv remittance processing center. High-speed scanners capture images and data from the coupons to speed up the payment process. To reduce exceptions, payments are compared with stop or acceptance files. A Smart Look-up feature can be used to further reduce exceptions created by missing data from check-only payments.

After processing, a single data transmission – sorted by homeowners association or property – is sent to the property management company to update the accounts receivable records of each of its associations/properties. A second transmission – also sorted by association/property – feeds payment information to the financial institution for DDA posting.

Fiserv provides same-day access to deposit information as well as images of the owners' checks and coupons through RemitStream Receivables Online. Searches can be conducted by homeowners association/property number or other data contained in the coupon scanline. Special property management reports are also available online.
